

BETTER THAN CALOMEL

Thousands Have Discovered Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are a Harmless Substitute

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets—the substitute for calomel—are a mild but sure laxative, and their effect on the liver is almost instantaneous. They are the result of Dr. Edwards' determination not to treat liver and bowel complaints with calomel. His efforts to banish it brought out these little olive-colored tablets.

These pleasant little tablets do the good that calomel does, but have no bad after effects. They do not injure the teeth like strong liquids or calomel. They take hold of the trouble and quickly correct it. Why cure the liver at the expense of the teeth? Calomel sometimes plays havoc with the gums. So do strong liquids. It is best not to take calomel, but to let Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets take its place.

Most headaches, "dullness" and that lazy feeling come from constipation and a disordered liver. Take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets when you feel "lousy" and "heavy." Note how they "clear" the brain and how they "perk up" the spirits. 10c and 25c a box. All druggists.

FREIGHT HANDLERS STRIKE

Fourteen Central Vermont Employees at White River Jct. Out.

White River, Junction, April 11.—The transfer of freight which has been conducted here by the Central Vermont railroad for years past on what is known as the general transfer platform, has been discontinued and the work is being done, for the present at least, in St. Albans. The change came as a result of labor trouble when the men employed here in this department, numbering about 14, went out on a strike.

The railroad yard section men and the engine house workers are also involved and have joined the striking transfer workers.

Colonial Life in Massachusetts

Gov. John Hancock of Massachusetts, afterward president of the First Congress, was noted as a bon-vivant. The governor was both good-hearted and vain. He kept open house; and even strangers were invited to warm themselves in his chimney-corner, and sip from his tankard of punch, always after he had quenched his own thirst. Many stories are extant of his travels, attended by two outriders, a postilion, coachman, and footman, all in livery. The coach-and-four was his favorite mode of conveyance.

The governor married sweet Mistress Dorothy Quincy, the cousin of Joe Adams, at the very time when a price was offered for his head by King George. They were wedded in concealment while he held office as governor, in Fairfield, Conn.; and just as they were about sitting down to dinner, a countryman rushed in, exclaiming that the British were coming. The company disappeared in hot haste, and that dinner was never eaten—a fact which, no doubt, the governor, a lover of good cheer, always regretted.

He made up for it later, however, in his elegant home on Beacon street, Boston, which became the centre of fashionable festivities till his death, in 1793. The silver tankard, holding a gallon or more, filled with punch in the early morning, was empty by breakfast time of the day which it aggravated. Another and smaller tankard of silver, with massive handles, held only half as much as its larger neighbor and this it was which so frequently passed from hand to hand, replenished from the other.

Mistress Dorothy ably seconded his open hospitality, and was admired as the most lovely, graceful, and accomplished of all the fair daughters of the Commonwealth. Seductively beautiful in her portrait, as with an arch smile, she rests her shapely head upon a no less shapely hand. Excelling in the preparation of rich viands, she was successful above all in the cooking of venison and the making of mincepies, the fame of which he as enduring as that of her beauty. There were thirteen servants to manage large stores of homespun and fine nappery, and much sterling silver, bearing the Tower stamp, including immense salvers and candelabra, spoons, forks, and wash-bowl and ever.

Governor Hancock was the owner of valuable china, as fine as any now imported; but he chose to eat from a service of English pewter, with which, he thought, there was less clatter of knives and forks. Not so, thought the domestics, whose duty it was to keep them brightly burnished, no slight task with such a tabular as gathered daily in that gorgeous dining-hall.

So China was laid upon the spotless cloth whenever the gentle master was confined to his chamber with that constantly increasing disease which finally cost his life. "Have you been using my china?" he queried one day. The servants were obliged to tell the truth. "Bring it up here, every piece of it!" he thundered out. They brought it up, and piled it beside his couch, fine, fragile, and out with it all upon the ground," he thundered forth. Trembling and silent they obeyed. But the peevish and arbitrary invalid shrewdly listened for the noise of breakage, and listened in vain.

"Bring up the pieces, every one!" he thundered again. "I will see who is master here."

Silently they brought up the unbroken dishes. They had been purposely and carefully thrown upon the soft turf.

"Throw them on the pavement, every piece! Let none escape." And this time his commands were obeyed. The Hancock porcelain was all destroyed.

It is not related how Mistress Dorothy liked these arbitrary measures of her liege lord. Was she "mistress of herself, though china fall?" It is related, though, that she successfully conducted an historic repast.

The French fleet lay in Boston Harbor with Admiral D'Estaing in charge. Him and thirty of his chief officers the governor invited to a luncheon at his mansion, the finest the city had. Gladly accepting, the Admiral had the hardihood to ask that all his petty officers might be included in the invitation. And Gov. Hancock did not decline.

Without a regular market, without bakers, confectioners, and caterers, Mrs. Hancock sat at her wits' end to supply her table. All the rough wagons in the suburbs were pressed into service, and the country scoured of fowls, pigs, bees, and poultry, as well as vegetables.

The morning wore apace, and there was not half milk enough for the coffee. Summoning the city guards, and pressing into service the servants, she gave them pitchers, bowls and pails and sent out to milk the cows upon Boston Common, which was then the general pasture-ground of all the citizens. Much laughter, fun, and frolic followed, and there was milk enough and to spare. The French officers marched up at the appointed hour, and never did Gallie queen treat her courtiers more royally than this provincial republican. They were charmed with her grace and wit.

Not long afterward the Admiral gave a dinner to Gov. and Mrs. Hancock on board his boat. With much curiosity she noticed a silken cord attached to the table near her chair. At the close of the repast the Admiral asked her to pull the cord. She did so, and it discharged a gun, which was the signal of a salvo of artillery in honor of her own fair self.—Reprinted from the initial number of "The Epicure," April, 1887.

RAIN IN GRAIN BELTS

Saving Thousands of Acres That Would Have Been Ruined.

Kansas City, April 12.—Rains that soaked the wheat and grain belts in Oklahoma and Kansas yesterday saved thousands of acres that would have been ruined had the drought continued a few days more, according to the opinions expressed by expert agriculturists. Reports received here today indicated that at various points in Kansas and eastern Oklahoma the rain is continuing. Frank M. Gault, President of the State Board of Agriculture of Oklahoma, declared last night that if the rain continued today the wheat crop in that state would be from 20,000,000 to 23,000,000 bushels as compared with last year's crop of 27,000,000.

The situation in Kansas was summed up by J. C. Mohler, the secretary of the State Board of Agriculture, with a statement that it had been of untold value to the winter wheat.

The oats crop in Kansas was expected to benefit particularly from the downpour, which amounted to more than an inch yesterday in the western parts of the state. The largest oats acreage in the history of the state is being sown this spring, it is said, and the ground is in excellent condition now for the planting of corn. In Oklahoma arrangements have been made by the Oklahoma Bankers' Association to furnish seed where replanting of wheat becomes necessary.

WHAT WEAK WOMEN NEED

We Have It in a Remedy Containing the Three Oldest and Most Famous Tonics Known.

Vinol contains the oldest and most famous tonics known to medicine, viz., beef and cod liver peptones, iron and manganese peptonates and glycerophosphates.

That is why Vinol is such a wonderful remedy for weak, run-down persons, feeble old people, delicate children, and to restore strength after sickness. Read this testimony.

Savannah, Ga. "I was weak, nervous, run-down, had no appetite, and could not sleep, I had tried medicines without any benefit, and one day the nurse asked me to try Vinol. I did so and it made me feel like a new woman. It has restored my strength and I can do all my own housework. I would not take anything for the good Vinol has done me." Sarah White.

We return money in every such case where Vinol fails to benefit the purchaser.—W. L. Gokay, Druggist, Bennington, also at the Leading Drug Stores in all Vermont towns.

Will Never Be Without This Simple Laxative

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin Relieved Her Baby When Nothing Else Would.

Little Max Pendergrast is now four years old, and a healthy boy. When but a tiny baby, in fact almost from birth, he suffered a great deal from constipation. His mother, Mrs. Carl W. Pendergrast Red Key, Ind., heard of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin obtained a bottle of it from the drug store, and with it was able to quickly correct this condition.

Mrs. Pendergrast says Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin has saved them from calling the doctor many times, and that she will never be without a bottle of it in the house to use when needed. She found it equally effective as a laxative for herself and other members of the family.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a combination of simple laxative herbs with pepsin, pleasant to the taste, mild in action and positive in effect. It does not gripe or strain, and contains no opiate or narcotic drug. It is the ideal family laxative, mild and pleasant for baby, yet acting quickly on the strongest constitution.

To avoid imitations and ineffective substitutes be sure to ask for Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. See that a facsimile of Dr. Caldwell's signature and his portrait appear on the yellow carton in which the bottle is packed. A trial bottle, free of charge, can be obtained by writing to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 455 Washington St., Monticello, Illinois.
